THE WORLD'S LEADING SPORTING AND DRAMATIC
WEEKLY FOR 75 YEARS

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE TRACED IN NEW SHAW DRAMA

"Back to Methuselah," Ranging in Action from Creation to Year 31920, Will Be Produced by New York Theatre Guild in Three "Cycles," One a Week; Other News of Stage and Screen.

ANOTHER ambitious production to follow Andreyev's ironical drama, "He Who Gets Slapped," at the Garrick Theatre, New York city, is in preparation by the Theatre Guild. It is none other than the much discussed play by George Bernard Shaw, entitled "Back to Methuselah."

It is, in fact, really five plays, with scenes ranging from Creation to the year A. D. 31920. To give the play in its entirety it is necessary to give it as a cycle, covering three performances.

"In the Beginning," laid in the Garden of Eden, and "The Gospel of the Brothers Barnabas," laid in London at the present time, will be given as the first production. "The Thing Happens," which takes place in the parlor of the President of the British Isles in A. D. 2170, and "The Tragedy of an Elderly Gentleman," which has for its setting Gaiway Bay in A. D. 3000, will comprise the second offering, with "As Far as Thought Can Reach," occurring in A. D. 31920, as the third performance.

Each bill will run for one week. The first production will be made at the Garrick the night of Feb. 20, the second Feb. 27, and the last March 6. Then the cycle will be repeated. "He Who Gets Slapped" will be moved to the Fulton Theatre, opening there at a matinee next Monday, Feb. 13.

"Orphans of the Storm," David W. Griffith's latest motion picture production, is attracting crowded houses to the Apollo Theatre, New York. This is the "master director's" screen version of that famous old play, "The Two Orphans," and the appealing Gish sisters, Lillian and Dorothy, give admirable portrayals of the French girls, Henriette and Louise, waifs in the streets of Paris.

The rialto of the metropolis is just now revelling in a primitive taste for melodrama. The hisses turn out in force at every performance of "Bull Dog Drummond," the English thriller at the Knickerbocker; there is intrigue and knife play and sudden death in "Drifting," a capital melodrama at the Playhouse, with Robert Warwick and Helen Menken in the leading roles of a story laid in the Chinese hills and seaports, while William Gillette contributes spinal chills at the Empire in "The Dream Maker," wherein he thwarts a gang of desperate blackmailers.

Repeating its success of a dozen years ago is "The Chocolate Soldier," the lilting Viennese operetta, at the Century Theatre, New York. Donald Brian and Tessa Kosta have the leading roles. This is one of the most successful revivals the big town has ever seen.

A party of convalescent soldiers, under the care of the Sunset Club, were guests of S. L. Rothafel, managing director at the Capitol Theatre, New York, one day during the week's run of the Goldwyn feature production, "The Man from Lost River," recently.

Now it is George M. Cohan, the "Yankee Doodle" comedian and producer, who promises to make war upon ticket speculating, the greatest evil and menace to the present day stage. Cohan is quoted as having said that some of the managers work hand in glove with the scalpers, frankly for the profit that comes from mulcting the public. He says the practise could be checked, if not stopped altogether, by stringent laws to punish offenders.

Miss Vivienne Osborne and John Roche have been added to the cast of "The Good Provider," a Fannie Hurst story being directed for Cosmopolitan productions by Frank Borzage. The cast also includes Dore Davidson, Vera Gordon, Miriam Battista and William (Buster) Collier, Jr.

"Get Together," Charles Dillingham's seventh annual production at the New York Hippodrome, in many respects offers the most varied type of entertainment ever presented at the big playhouse, which has built its success upon the ability of Mr. Dillingham to anticipate and to supply something for persons of every walk of life and from every section of the Union who make up its huge clientele. The Hippodrome bill is headed by the Fokine ballet, "The Thunder Bird," the most pretentious example of modern choreographic art the American stage has known.

Richard Carle, the shiny-domed comedian, recently joined the cast of "Tangerine," the successful musical comedy starring Miss Julia Sanderson at the Casino, New York. At about the same time Miss Tallulah Bankhead took over the role of the modernist wife in "Danger," starring H. B. Warner, at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre. Both of these productions are under the management of Carle Carlton.

Charles Dillingham's annual Jerome Kern-Anne Caldwell musical comedy for production early next fall will be called "The Bunch and Judy." Jerome Kern will compose the music while he is abroad spending the summer at his villa in England. Miss Caldwell has already outlined the scenario and will have the lyrics prepared before Mr. Kern's departure.

"Won Easy in Eighty-seven Rounds."

The following was culled from Boxing, the British sporting publication:

"Siki has been making a name for himself in Paris by knocking out the same man twice in the same night. This is nearly a record I should imagine, as the slugged-out one rarely wants a second dose so soon after the first. I remember a case in Australia where this happened, and the loser turned the tables on the knocker-out. It was a knuckle fight between 'Possum' Ward, a well-known character, and a 'Cousin Jack.' 'Possum' was only a youngster at the time, and the 'Cousin,' who outed him in the first round, was possibly moved to pity. 'Dang it all,' he said, 'I'll gi' 'im another chance.' 'Possum' displayed his gratitude by beating his generous opponent after a prolonged battle. His wire to his father in Melbourne is still recalled in Australian fight circles. It read: 'Won easy in eighty-seven rounds.—Possum.'"

FAMOUS RING BATTLES OF OTHER DAYS

Fought in Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 15, 1898: Peter Maher Hammers "Thunderbolt" Smith so Persistently that Dusky Boxer Has Enough in Third Round; Other Notable Old-time Contests Reviewed by an Expert for POLICE GAZETTE Readers.

GOOD old Irish Peter Maher, cradled in Galway, may not have been the greatest ringman that ever sprang from the old sod, and toward the end of his picturesque career he kissed the canvas with some frequency; but his defeats were always due to the socking superiority of his foe and never because of any lack of gameness on Maher's part. Peter had a fighter's heart and the battling instinct, and woe betide the fellow who faced him without a plentiful supply of that spiritual quality known as moral courage.

"Thunderbolt" Smith, a dusky heavyweight who cut something of a figure in the squared circle some twenty-five years ago, discovered this fact when he met the Celtic terror in a combat staged in Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 15, 1898. The bout, which was scheduled for six rounds, stirred up considerable enthusiasm in the city of aristocrats, colonial homes and the Liberty Bell. But it lasted only three stanzas: for by that time the ebony-hued thunderbolt decided that discretion was the better part of valor, and indicated that he was willing to have the infuriated Mr. Maher cease and call it an evening.

The first two rounds brought forth a display of clever boxing in which Smith did remarkably well. He was a good match for Maher in size and showed a great deal of ring science, but he was cautious and kept his left glove high in order to stave off Maher's famous right-hand punch.

Maher was the first to lead when the fight began, but his blow, a right, landed back of Smith's neck. This was followed by a stiff left for the stomach which Smith caught on the arm. Smith connected with the first solid blow, a left on the face; but Peter soon more than evened up matters by getting home a left on the stomach and planting three rights on the face—all in quick succession. Maher guarded Smith's next left hand punch and when the black man let go again Peter countered him. A left in the face and a right on the ear from Maher ended the round.

Then Peter Got Busy

At this rate the fight seemed likely to continue the full six rounds, as the second round opened up similar to the first. After a little sparring, however, Maher sent his right into Smith's ribs and repeated the dose almost before the colored man knew what had happened. Then Peter sent a straight left into Smith's neck and also brought his right around. The "Thunderbolt" showed that he was still in the game by landing his left on Maher's face on the break-away.

Peter then executed one of the prettiest bits of boxing used in the bout, by working the double right to the heart and left ear. Both were good, stiff punches. They made the colored fighter wary and and he backed away for a time. Maher kept after him and let go a left, followed by a terrific right. Smith dodged both blows.

Early in the third round the real fight began. Smith started hostilities by a swift left in the face, which Maher tried to cross but failed. Peter sent his left into Smith's face with a sort of uppercut punch and then sent his right to the face again. Two lefts on Smith's map followed quickly. Then came a swift uppercut that Smith ducked. A left and right and then a left stomach blow made Smith look pretty worried. A speedy left in the face, followed by a right on the chin, made him stagger. Another straight left to the face sent the negro to the ropes. Smith wobbled back and Maher went at him like a whirlwind. It was left and right, left and right for four times and Smith went down. He got up slowly and although he was partially hanging on the ropes, Maher soaked him again. Smith held up his right hand signifying defeat, but Maher only gave him another wallop.

DAVE SHADE.

Although the dusky fighter was knocked down twice he was on his feet at the end of the bout. It was very evident, however, that he was no match for Maher when it came to rough treatment.

CLABBY BEATS SAILOR PETROSKY

Jimmy Clabby, the Illinois boy, whom many able judges regarded as one of the most formidable contenders for the middleweight title, gave a fine exhibition of his quality when he defeated Sailor Petroskey for the second time in a return match at the Vernon Arena, Vernon, Calif., Feb. 12, 1914. Although not rated very high in the middleweight list, Petroskey nevertheless was entitled to quite a bit of consideration because of his punching powers. Clabby decisively disposed of him, actually boxing circles around him and neutralizing the sailor's punch with his cleverness.

Clabby's exhibition was Attelian in its display of fistic science and ring generalship. He jabbed, hooked and cuffed Petroskey at will, and had he possessed a punch of any weight at all he would have made his victory more conclusive. But, like the ex-featherweight king, the middleweight pretender lacked a wallop that effected more damage than a bloody nose or a split lip.

Clabby's punches, despite their number, at no time daunted Petroskey or had him in danger. He fought aggressively and kept tearing in, disregarding the blows showered at him from all angles as though they were mere drops of gentle rain. He strove constantly to get inside the range of his opponent's punches and wage the battle at close quarters. Except for an occasional brief period, he never realized his intentions in any of the twenty rounds. When he did work in close Clabby showed an excellent defense and smothered and blocked nearly all the sailor's smashes.

The greater part of the battle was fought at long range. Clabby held the sailor off with his left, and when the latter did succeed in working his way in, Jimmy backed off, all the while shooting a wide assortment of left and right-hand punches to head and body.

Several times the lack of a weighty punch cost Clabby a knockout victory. He often planted his feet solidly on the rosined canvas and met Petroskey's rushes with full force right-hand crosses to the jaw. The blows failed even to jar the sailor or erase the smile that he wore at all times.

After the tenth round Clabby clinched the victory, and in none of the latter stages of the bout did Petroskey do so well as to hold Jimmy even in any one round. At the close of the fight, the aggregate effect of Clabby's punches had Petroskey tired and in slight distress. The little punishment that Petroskey administered was damaging for, at the end, Clabby was bleeding from nose and mouth and his lips were puffed.

KILBANE STOPS KIRKWOOD

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight titleholder, showed a bit of his championship form to a New York crowd for the first time when he stopped George Kirkwood of St. Louis in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round battle at the Empire Athletic Club, Feb. 19, 1913.

The ringside weights showed Kilbane at 125 pounds and Kirkwood one pound less.

The champion was master from the start, but the first two rounds failed to show anything of a speedy nature from either contestant. Kirkwood was plainly nervous and when he was not backing away he was leading very weakly. Kilbane, always stronger as a defensive fighter than on the attack, had very little difficulty in stepping away from the punches of the St. Louis boy, and shot in enough left jabs to earn him the honors in both the first and second rounds.

In the third canto, Kilbane showed more of a tendency to mix matters than he had manifested in any of his previous bouts in Gotham and quickly had Kirkwood either covering up or backing into the ropes.

In the fourth round Kilbane continued to do the forcing and Kirkwood did little more than try to protect himself from the punches which the champion shot in from all angles. A minute before the round ended it seemed as though the champion would surely put Kirkwood out, but the latter survived to the bell. He was weak in the knees when he walked to his corner.

The champion set to work in the fifth round at a clip that left no doubt of his sincerity to go at top speed. Before the round had gone far he had floored Kirkwood with a hard left to the jaw, and when the latter got up without taking a count he was quickly floored again. He was down for the third time and had taken the count of nine when the bell sounded, ending the round.

After the sixth round had gone about two minutes,

Kilbane floored Kirkwood again with a hard right to the jaw and Referee Dan Toney stopped the bout. Kirkwood protested, but undoubtedly he was defeated.

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method; it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. BRIEF AND TO THE POINT

BASEBALL

Frank Frisch, "the Fordham flash," has signed a two-year contract to play second base for the New York Giants, at a salary said to be $15,000 a year. This is a substantial increase over what Frisch received last season, when his brilliant work at bat and at third base made him stand out as perhaps McGraw's most effulgent star. Frisch will be shifted over to second next spring, as Heinie Groh, recently obtained by the Giants in a trade with Cincinnati, is to hold down third base.

Eddie Roush, star outfielder of the Reds, will not be traded or sold to anybody by Cincinnati, according to a recent emphatic statement from August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Club. In other words, Herrmann insists that Roush will play with the Reds or not at all. Eddie has again made heavy salary demands and threatens to be a spring "hold-out."

The official announced that if women wished to see boxing exhibitions they must arrange for them to be held with members of the fair sex present, with none but men at bouts for the males. "In no case," he declared, "will a boxing bout be permitted before a crowd of both men and women. Violation of the rule will mean revocation of its license for the club."

SWIMMING

A recent announcement by Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, was to the effect that swimming had been dropped from the list of intercollegiate sports at Harvard University. The reasons assigned for the decision were lack of interest among the student body and inadequate facilities to promote the aquatic sport.

RIFLE BARRELS PASS TESTS

On the breech end of every Winchester gun barrel, and on the receiver of every Winchester gun, there is a little monogram "W P" enclosed in an oval. This is known as the Winchester Proof Mark. It means that this barrel has passed the most severe tests of a gun barrel to detect weaknesses or flaws.

Each Winchester gun barrel is given the provisional test after the first boring. The barrel is tested by the use of a powder charge two or two and a half times as great and a bullet considerably heavier than that intended to be used in the shell for which the barrel is to be chambered. Careful inspection is given to see if any effect of this test is visible, if not, the barrel passes on to completion.

This test has been in use by the Winchester Repeating Arms Company for fifty years. When the gun has been completely assembled, it is submitted to the "Winchester Definitive Proof" test.

"Pepper" Martin, the hard-hitting Brooklyn (N. Y.) featherweight, defeated Kid Sullivan, also of the borough of homes, in a twelve-round battle at the Rink Sporting Club Brooklyn, Jan. 19. Although the bout was close, the judges awarded the decision to Martin.

RING HISTORY OF THE NEAR-CHAMPIONS

CHAPTER LXXIX.

LES DARCY

The promising Australian middleweight, whose career was cut short when he failed in his duty as a patriot.

LESS than a decade ago there sprang into international prominence a young middleweight, a product of the Australian bush, whose prowess in the ring set fistic experts the world over to predicting great things for him. That he was destined to be the champion of his division seemed certain—as certain as anything is on this mundane sphere. Then the world war descended like a pall upon civilization and the youthful boxer went under with it, not as a warrior, but as a man shirking the responsibility of his birthright.

The name of this boyish marvel was Les Darcy. He flashed like a meteor across the pugilistic horizon, compiling a formidable record as a boxer over the span of a few brief years. Then, with the curse of mankind directed against him he passed out at the age of twenty-two. Whether he would have become a champion is one of the riddles that will forever remain unanswered. Certainly he gave rare promise of doing great deeds.

This article is neither in praise nor blame of Les Darcy, for he has faced judgment and settled his account. It is merely the ring record of a prodigy who might have achieved honor and enduring fame instead of ignominy and untimely death.

At 16 Wins Two Tournaments

The sensational Antipodean first saw the light of day in West Maitland, New South Wales, Oct. 28, 1895. His parents were in very moderate circumstances, and there is little or no record of his early life until, at the age of sixteen, he pre-empted a place in the sporting spotlight of his native Australia by winning two tournaments, at 140 pounds and 147 pounds respectively, conducted at Sydney. They were in the nature of elimination contests, for weeding out likely mitt prospects in the land of the kangaroo.

This feat was accomplished by young Darcy in 1911. The following year, greatly heartened by his showing, he made his real debut in the professional ring. His first two battles were with Jimmy Burns and Dave Depena, a couple of bushwhackers like himself, but hardy fellows. Darcy stopped the former in eleven rounds and earned the decision over the latter in nine cantos. He displayed not only remarkable cleverness, but uncovered a punch that was reminiscent of the great Stanley Ketchel. He was a veritable whirlwind in the squared circle, and the many friends who had encouraged his career as a professional pugilist began touting him as a coming titleholder.

Darcy began as a welterweight, but soon took on poundage, as he was a rapidly growing boy, and the following year—1913—saw him giving battle to middleweights. He engaged in five fights, scoring knockouts over Bill Hannan in eighteen rounds, Red Delaney in seven and Joe Shakespeare in six. He took the verdict on points from Bill McNabb in twenty frames and lost a close one to Bob Whitelaw in twenty rounds. A few months later he knocked out Whitelaw.

Rises Rapidly Toward the Top

From that time on the progress of Les Darcy was swiftly towards the top of the heap. He ran up a string of K. O. victories that attracted the attention of ring fans throughout the civilized globe. He started his campaign for 1914 by hanging the slumber wallop on the chin of Jack Clarke in the ninth round of a mill staged at Sydney, on Jan. 5th. Then he socked Young Hanley into dreamland. Then Bob Whitelaw, Billy McNabb, K. O. Marchand, Gus Christie and Dyer all went to keep Hanley company.

His first fight in 1915 was the only one he lost all year—and that was to the American, Jeff Smith. Twice he K. O'd Eddie McGoorty, who left this country to try his luck with Les.

Eddie was no match at all for the husky Darcy. It was said that there had never been a fight in Australia that could hold a candle to McGoorty's second battle with Darcy, at Sydney, Dec. 27, 1915. It was an honor for even the beaten man to have taken part in it, for it will never leave the memory of any who saw it. The science and skill of Darcy rushed the crowd off its feet. Darcy outfought and outboxed McGoorty all the way and by the seventh round had him cornered.

McGoorty made a big fight for a comeback but was badly punished for his pains. He opened by landing a good straight left to the nose. Then a heavy left swing to Darcy's body—about the finest blow McGoorty landed—made the champ fight like a wildcat, with the result that his opponent's head was flayed with resounding wallops. Rights to his body made McGoorty gasp.

Stops McGoorty in Eighth

In the eighth the American tried his best to even matters, but he soon learned he had met his master at every phase of the game. Presently a stiff uppercut to the chin floored McGoorty for the knockout. The winner, flushed a bit, yet unmarked and looking as fresh as paint, pushed forward and shook his gallant opponent's hand as he sat helplessly in his chair. It was a good, square, clean fight and everybody admitted it.

Les also met another American, Jimmy Clabby, in October of 1915. He had the same luck as McGoorty, losing in twenty rounds. Frank Loughrey, Fritz Holland, Henri Demlin, Mick King and Billy Murray were all shown so many stars they couldn't count them. And thus ended the year for Darcy, twelve fights and eleven victories.

"Old father time" popped his head into 1916 and found Darcy with his arms swinging against George Brown. Brown didn't have a chance. He was a mighty wallop, but he didn't know enough about boxing Darcy even to get a blow at him. His method was to swing, rush and hug. Darcy let him fight in his own way and at close quarters hammered him with body blows and constant short jabs and uppercuts to the head and face. The American stood it all like a stone wall. The same punishment had left Clabby all cut up by Darcy, but Brown, though his face was puffed and swollen and his ribs hammered into slackness, was still intact. The American did not win a single round during the whole journey. Brown was reputed to be a good fighter, although not thought as good as Darcy, it was a sufficient cause to get a record crowd on deck.

Six Knockdowns in a Row

The next six acts on Darcy's program scored six K. O.s; Hardwick, Les O'Donnel, Buck Crouse, Alex

Costica and two from Dave Smith. On Aug. 26 Jimmy Clabby stepped into the ring with Les. It was a twenty-round fight that Darcy won on points. This was the second time that Darcy had defeated Clabby this way in a twenty-round, although it was not by an overwhelming margin. George Chip was the next who took his defeat. It was a nine-round fight.

The Australian had side-stepped no one, taking them all as they came. He had beaten McGoorty, Clabby, Jeff Smith, Chip, Buck Crouse, Billy Murray and Brown. Darcy had fairly and squarely beaten every one of these men, and whenever there was the least doubt of his victory he offered to repeat—just to show that no mistake had been made.

At this stage of the game Darcy was criticized for not having joined the colors. Official reports stated, however, that he was under twenty-one and in such a case needed the consent of his mother. This he was not able to get.

On Oct. 28, 1916, he left his native country on the Q. T. and came to America. Whether to avoid possible conscription or to gain a fortune we will never know; nevertheless, he was received here as though he were a mighty potentate. The boxing fans, newspaper and camera men were at the docks by the hundreds. Darcy got away big with every one for he had a smile and disposition that were fetching.

Wanted to Fight Willard

When questioned as to whom he wanted to fight he picked on Jess Willard as the principal one, but preferred Carpenter as his first contestant. At the time Carpenter was in the war, but Tex Rickard thought he could bring sufficient influence to bear to get a leave of absence for the French aviator in order to allow him to meet Darcy. While this situation was pending, challenges were coming in to Darcy from all corners of the country. To as many Darcy turned a deaf ear. The main reason being that he had been offered $2,500 a week to go on the vaudeville stage. This was an easier job than facing anybody in the ring—and more lucrative, too.

The next jolt that came to boxing enthusiasts was the impending danger that Gov. Whitman was going to put the ban on boxing. They didn't have much more than time to think it over when Darcy got a letter from the governor forbidding him to box in New York state, owing to the fact that he was considered a slacker. Several states chimed in with New York.

The next milestone in Darcy's life was when he took out his first naturalization papers at Memphis, Tenn., and at the same time enlisted in aviation. He didn't have a chance to prove his love for this country to any greater degree, for soon after he was taken with a fever and on May 24, 1917, died.

Thus ended the career of a fighter who had all the chances in the world to be middleweight champion.

That clever lightweight, Dave Deshler, will be the subject of next week's Near-Champion story. So as not to miss it, order your copy of the POLICE GAZETTE in advance.

Wrestler vs. Boxer Which Will Win?

Can a boxer best a wrestler? Bob Fitzsimmons, then world's heavyweight champion, attempted to answer this question years ago. "Bring on your wrestler," he said. Ernest Roeber, star wrestler of the period, was produced. In less time than it takes to tell, Roeber had pinned Fitzsimmons shoulders to the mat!

In 1910, wrestler Farmer Burns met champion boxer, Billy Papke, then at the crest of his career. Burns at the time was fifty-one or two. Large sums were bet on the pugilist. But eighteen seconds after the gong, Burns had Papke down!

James J. Corbett, himself the world's most scientific boxer, relating these incidents for the King Feature Syndicate, says, "NINETY-NINE times out of a hundred, the wrestler will win."

Women at Boxing Bouts

Although Many of Fair Sex Now Take an Interest in Manly Art, They Were Seldom Seen at Ringside in Former Days Until Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons Set Fashion; Sometimes They Attended in Male Attire.

THERE was a time when the presence of a woman at a boxing exhibition was like a diamond in an ash-heap. Nowadays, however, an increasing number of the representatives of the gentler sex manifest an absorbed interest in the manly art. There is always a liberal sprinkling of women in the weekly gatherings at Madison Square Garden, New York's pugilistic Mecca, and for a long while there has been a noticeable feminine contingent in evidence at the four-round exhibitions at Jack Doyle's arena in Vernon, Calif.

Nevertheless, all was different in the old days Mrs. Robert Fitzsimmons was at the ringside when her husband fought James J. Corbett at Carson City, Nev., and won the heavyweight championship, and thus set a fashion, as it were, that appears to be exerting a greater and greater hold upon women who enjoy athletic competition above all other diversions. In an article on women at prizefights, The Boxing World and Mirror of Life, a London publication, sets forth some reminiscences sent in by a boxing fan. Said this ringside devotee:

"Down at Coney Island, when Fitzsimmons was hammering Sharkey into helplessness, Aug. 24, 1900, some sharp-eyed man spied a person who was soon pronounced as a woman. The stranger wore a derby hat, under which were flaxen curls in abundance. The cheeks were smooth and pink, the eyes were big and blue and the lips were red. The hands were lily white and the fingers tapered. A neat-fitting coat and trousers, a standing collar and a white silk puff tie in which nestled a sparkling stone, set off distinctly feminine outlines.

"Beside this odd personage sat two young men well groomed and evidently accustomed to the surroundings. They watched their companion closely and were evidently on the alert for surprises. A Central Office man on duty in the big arena got the tip and was soon inspecting the cynosure of neighboring eyes.

"Say," said the detective finally, 'are you a man or a woman?'

"The girl blushed to the roots of her hair, but she did not open her mouth.

"She's a man all right," replied one of the girl's companions, 'let her alone!'

"She's out of order," was the heartless rejoinder, 'and she'll have to take a sneak.'

"So, without the semblance of a fuss, the girl who had been watching the fight in open-mouthed wonder withdrew.

"At a fight in Baltimore a woman, dressed in male attire, was arrested. She did not offer an excuse beyond saying that she had a grudge against one of the contestants and wanted to see him 'licked good.'

"At the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons mill in San Francisco, however, women were allowed to look on."

Last month in London, according to cable reports, Madame Carpentier was among the spectators in Albert Hall when her husband, Georges, knocked out George Cook of Australia in the fourth round.

M'GRAW SIGNS TO LEAD GIANTS FOR FIVE YEARS MORE AT RECORD SALARY

At a salary said to be $85,000 per annum, John J. McGraw, vice-president and part owner of the New York Giants, has signed a five-year contract to manage Manhattan's National League team, which last fall earned the title of world's champions by defeating the New York Yankees in the post-season series. When he affixed his John Hancock to the dotted line, the "Little Napoleon" of baseball became the highest-salaried manager in the game. With his increased yearly wage, and the dividends he receives as a substantial stockholder in the club, McGraw's annual earnings, it is said, will be around $100,000.

McGraw by his action also set at rest recent rumors that he was about to retire as active manager of the club in the field. He will continue to direct his players from the bench as in the season of 1921, perhaps occasionally donning a uniform and appearing on the coaching lines. He will retain Hughey Jennings, however, and may have Johnny Evers with him again in the coming pennant chase in an advisory capacity.

Of the sixty-four matches he has participated in since 1914 he has not lost one, and more than half these mat battles were won in ten minutes or less.

While in Canada a short while ago he downed his only opponent, Frank Sackson, the first fall in five minutes and the second in three and a half.

McGraw came to the Giants in 1902 from the Baltimore Orioles. As manager he won his first pennant for New York in 1904. The Giants repeated in 1905, the year when they defeated the Philadelphia Athletics in the world series, chiefly through the pitching wizardry of Christy Mathewson. The Giants won flags thereafter in 1911, 1912 and 1913; their sixth in 1917 and their last one in 1921, and with it the world's title.

Aiming For the Button

Tendency on the Part of Latter-day Boxers to Keep Swinging For the Jaw, to the Exclusion of Well-directed Body Blows; Champions Realize What Damage May Be Done by Attack on Midriff.

THE persistency with which a great majority of the boxers performing around New York these days appear to confine their attention to "aiming for the button" has raised the question whether these lads, who hope some day to be champions, are not neglecting one of the most important departments of fisticuffs—namely, the body blow.

Pretty nearly nine out of ten of the promising lads who box in the preliminary bouts and the semi-finals seem to think that all they have to do to reach championship heights is to perfect a heavy sock for the chin, and there are so few of them who know what to do when it comes to attacking an opponent's mid-section that they can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

From first to final gong the boys can be seen swinging for the jaw, always striving for a quick and therefore a sensational knockout, and all too frequently failing to do their adversaries any harm whatsoever. The lad who mixes in a judicious assortment of body blows is the rarity, yet when one of these comes along he instantly makes a profound impression upon the ringsiders, and oftentimes gives bright promise of holding the title in his division.

Of course, there is no denying that a well-delivered blow to the point of the jaw, with its instant effect upon the recipient, brings a thrill to the spectator and is mighty satisfactory to the lad who lands it. For it either means victory right there or paves the way for an early finish. But on the other hand it is the one desperate chance that frequently misses its mark and, where there is an adequate defense, causes the wielder of the wild "Mary Ann" to look like a novice.

It is noteworthy that champions are well aware of the value of the body blow. It wears down an antagonist as nothing else will. Then when the proper time comes the body puncher can shift his tactics and shoot a few for the jaw with a greater chance of reaching the mark than if he had been aiming for the button throughout the contest.

Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey is a wonderful body puncher. In the first two rounds of his fight with Georges Carpentier he softened up the Frenchman for the fourth round knockout by inflicting merciless punishment upon Georges' mid-section. Jack is known the world over, also, for his terrific straight right for the heart, which, if it does not down his man, leaves him so chary of that vital spot and so eager to protect it from further damage that it is easy for Dempsey to switch to a left hook or a right hook to the jaw for the knockout.

It was the body punch—the famous solar plexus blow—delivered by Bob Fitzsimmons which won the world's title for the lanky Cornishman from Corbett. This blow was made famous by Fitz.

NEW BARK EXTRACT GIVES GREAT VIGOR

Vitalizer Found in Africa Produces Results in a Few Days—Better Than Gland Treatments.

The most amazing vitalizer known today has been discovered in the bark of an African tree. An extract made from this bark, and compounded in tablet form with other invigorators of proved merit, is declared to be far superior to even the famous "goat gland" and "monkey gland" treatments. In most cases it produces gratifying results in just a few days, and as the treatment is continued the vitality increases rapidly, the circulation improves and the glow of health is felt in every part.

If you have lost your youth, vigor and "pep" you need not worry. No matter what else you have tried without benefit, science declares flatly that you will get from this new extract the results you desire. In fact, the laboratories making the tablets for the American trade guarantee to refund the purchase price to anybody who reports "no benefit" after only one week's treatment.

On this basis, any reader of this paper may test the new discovery without risk. Send no money, but just your name and address to the Re-Bild Laboratories, Dept. 208, Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and you will receive by mail a full treatment of Re-Bild Tabs, as the new vitalizer is called. On delivery, pay the postman $2 and postage. Try the vitalizer a week and then if disappointed notify the laboratories and get your money back in full. You need not hesitate about accepting this test offer as it is fully guaranteed.

Knowledge of how to plant body blows adds greatly to the finish and style of a boxer. It gives greater variety to his work, and is a wonderful asset for a man who does not pack a slumber punch, for, by a ceaseless tattoo upon his opponent's midriff, he can whittle his man down to his size and strength, as well as scoring many points that may go to giving him the decision of the referee or judges in case no K. RING FAN'S LOUD VOICE EARNS HIM STEADY JOB

Much publicity was given the late Billy Jordan in this country on account of his bell-like tones when announcing fights, and he was described by many as the world's best ring orator. Americans who heard Billy when he was at his best, however, state that he had nothing on Peter McHugh, new announcer for Stadiums, Ltd., the boxing club now being operated by Jack Munroe at Rushcutter's Bay, Sydney, Australia.

McHugh, a youngster of twenty-six, standing over six feet in his socks, a typical Australian, long, lanky and angular, has a voice that sounds miles away. He discovered himself. For many months fans and officials at the Sydney Stadium were amused by the witticisms of a loud-voiced man who always occupied the same seat in the cheapest portion of the house. His remarks were usually to the point, funny and were loud enough to be heard by everyone in the big house, even when 20,000 persons were present.

His fame spread. Newspapermen mentioned him in their columns and one remarked what a fine announcer he would make. One night a stranger introduced himself to the doorkeeper and said he was after a job as announcer.

"We have one," said the doorkeeper.
"I know that," said the man, "But I can beat him. Let me see Jack Munroe."

Genial Jack happened along just then and the stranger was admitted. As soon as he entered the building he was recognized by the fans, who joyfully acclaimed him as one of themselves.

BOXING AS A TONIC

"To the onlooker there is healthy enjoyment to be derived from watching a fast, scientific boxing contest. Hit, stop, counter and get away, the spectator's nerves thrill with excitement as he watches the blows of the combatants," says a writer in Boxing World and Mirror of Life of London.

"This is healthy excitement, and it acts on the nervous system of the spectator like a strong, bracing tonic. Nature demands that man at intervals should take a mild excitement as a tonic for his jaded nerves, and there is no better tonic to be found than the one of listening to the 'talk of the gloves' for a few rounds.

"The amateur boxer loves the game for self alone. He glories in the tremendous amount of activity and muscular exercise which a hard contest demands. Physically, he is benefitted by the exercise of numberless muscles, which are brought into play during a scientific display of the art. Mentally, all his faculties are alert and quickened in his efforts to give blows and avoid those of an opponent.

'BABE' HERMAN OUTPOINTS SON OF 'JOHN, THE BARBER'

Dempsey's Pacific Coast Protege Takes Close Decision in Slashing 12-round Fracas with Dangerous Johnny Reisler; Both Featherweights Display Gameness.

ON the occasion of his second appearance in the ring at Madison Square Garden in a fortnight, "Babe" Herman, the fast and aggressive California featherweight, hung up a victory over Johnny Reisler of New York, son of the well-known "John, the Barber," in a twelve-round battle which was so close that it might have been declared a draw without hurting the feelings of anybody.

The Herman-Reisler scrap—and that's the right word for it, too—was put on as the main event of his card for the night of Jan. 20 by Tex Rickard, when illness prevented Midget Smith from meeting Joe Lynch in a return engagement. Two weeks before, Herman crossed gloves over the ten-round distance with Andy Chaney, and was declared the loser by the judges, although he had easily earned a draw. Hence it only evened matters for him when he took down the verdict from Reisler.

Herman, it will be recalled, is a protege of Jack Dempsey. Of Portuguese parentage, he was born in Sacramento, Calif., nineteen years ago. Several months before his fight with Carpenter, Dempsey ran across Herman, whose right name is Herman J. Souza, on the Pacific coast, and during the heavy-weight champion's training at Atlantic City for Georges, the "Babe" served as a sparring partner to polish up the speed of the Manassa mauler. His gameness and cleverness so won the admiration of Dempsey that the latter freely predicted that Herman would some day be a champion.

The Arm of Coincidence

Reisler, who is only eighteen years old, is the offspring of John Reisler, the sporting tinseltier, known as "John, the Barber," who, curiously enough at one time had managerial strings of some sort on Dempsey. Hence the meeting of the two boys had an added value of coincidence. Reisler's given name is Max, but he adopted his father's monicker for ring purposes. He is a fast, aggressive, thoroughly game and icily cool young fellow, with a nasty kick in his left hand. He has one of the most dangerous left hooks in the featherweight division and seems to possess a splendid fighting head as well.

Hence the match between Herman and Reisler was as even as could be managed. Both boys have surging ambitions to annex the crown now adorning the classic brow of one Johnny Kilbane. Failing that, Herman, who is growing fast, may some day take a shot at Benny Leonard for the lightweight championship.

Herman weighed 127 pounds for Reisler, while the barber's shaver tipped the beam at 124½. And the fireworks started as soon as they got together at the tap of the opening gong.

Reisler Takes First Round

The first round was Reisler's, but in the second the Pacific Coast boy landed a series of hard lefts and rights to the jaw that took a lot of confidence out of the barber's son. Johnny seemed willing to take a few hard wallops in order to get home his left. The third was about even, with the "Babe" doing most of the forcing. There were furious mixups in the fourth round that gave the crowd the first real excuse for cheering. Reisler appeared to have the better of these rallies, although Herman kept boring in. The "Babe" took some terrific slams on the jaw in the fifth, and for a time it looked as though he was on his way.

Again in the sixth, the Californian took a left hook on the chin that seemed good enough to win the war, but it merely urged the "Babe" on to greater efforts. Reisler started the claret flowing from the "Babe's" nose, but before the session ended Herman had nearly evened matters as the result of a fierce rally in Reisler's corner.

Herman socked Reisler with everything he had in the tenth and drove him to the ropes, but the New Yorker showed no signs of quitting. Toward the end of this session he pasted the "Babe" a couple, but the honors were easily the Californian's.

The eleventh and twelfth were each a slam, bang affair that got the crowd by the ears. They battled all over the ring, both landing terrific jolts to the face and body.

Although the crowd yelled for a draw, Herman's late rally had given him a shade in the opinion of the judges. In the semi-final bout Clonie Tait, the Winnipeg (Can.) lightweight, gave the game and willing Tim Droney of Lancaster, Pa., a boxing lesson for twelve rounds and took the verdict of the arbiters in a gallop.

TRIBUTE TO BENNY LEONARD AS ARTIST AND GENTLEMAN

A well-merited tribute to a boxer who adorns his profession and a timely hint to others who would follow in his footsteps is the following, which appeared recently in Walter St. Denis' column, Sport Views and Gossip, in the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser:

"Young 1922 should be proud of her bequest of 1921 in the person of Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion. An artist in the ring, a gentleman in and out of it, are two of the champion's great qualities. He never has been so obsessed with his own importance or greatness as to forget others less fortunate. He is ever ready to help the young fellow who is trying to get along, unimpaired of the possibility that the student may some day be opposed to him—the master—in a battle. For, be it known, that Benny is a very smart teacher. He has a way of imparting his knowledge so as to make fine boxers.

"This may have been noticed in Midget Smith's fight against Pete Herman. There was a show of the Leonard style at times in the way the Midget battled. The little fellow's sparring caused more than one to remark the similarity to the lightweight champion's to a limited extent. They were unaware that Smith had been working with Benny for a few weeks.

"But teaching the aspiring youngster is not all that Benny does. To uplift them, to see that they get their just dues, is one of the practices of the champion. He's a real champion to them, and many have profited by his advice.

"And, oh, yes! Sportsmanship is Benny's middle name. Instance: The other night in Milwaukee his fight with Pinkey Mitchell was postponed on account of Pinkey's illness. He didn't take the Milwaukee boy's $1,000 forfeit. And therein lies a story of doing to others as you would have them do to you. Read, Lew Tendler! And heed the example."

HEYDLER ASKS STANDARD BALL FOR ALL LEAGUES

President of National Circuit Declares Use of Differently Constructed Spheres in Majors and Minors Would Scramble Batting, Fielding and Pitching Averages.

A VIGOROUS plea for a standard baseball, to be used in both the major and the minor circuits, was voiced recently by John A. Heydler, president of the National League. Mr. Heydler's remarks were called forth by a report that the Pacific Coast League plans to adopt a rubber-cored ball for the season of 1922.

"Play with balls of different types of construction would throw batting, fielding and pitching averages into complete confusion, and to a great extent nullify such averages," said Mr. Heydler. "How could a manager or scout of a major league team get a line upon the ability of a minor league player if balls of various composition are to be used?"

"I believe that a rule should be incorporated in the major-minor league agreement to this effect. The rules now specify that the ball used by all shall be of a certain weight and size, but nothing is said regarding its component parts. In the past it has been generally accepted that all the leading leagues used a sphere of similar construction.

"If different leagues begin to adopt different types of ball confusion regarding the calibre of individual and team play will almost immediately result. Let us assume that while the Pacific Coast League uses a rubber-cored ball, another league adopts a livelier ball than now in general use. The result would be that it would be impossible to gain any idea of the batting, fielding or pitching ability of players in these leagues, as compared with the averages of the major leagues.

"If attendance figures can be taken as a criterion of the popularity of the game in the major leagues, then the fans can be safely said to approve of the type of baseball being played with the ball now in use. I am not familiar with conditions on the Pacific Coast, but I should regret to see the game played with different types of ball in various sections of the country, for it cannot fail to destroy the comparative value of the records which now form no small part of our national game."

On account of the excessively heavy batting with its abundance of long hits last season in the major circuits, the bleacherites came to the conclusion that the diamond athletes were playing with a "lively" ball—that is, one much faster than had been in use in prior seasons. The league heads all along insisted

EDDIE BENNETT MASCOT AGAIN FOR THE YANKEES

When the New York Yankees, champions of the American League, take the field this spring for the 1922 pennant chase, they will again have little Eddie Bennett as their mascot. This lad is extremely popular among the players and fans at the Polo Grounds, and his winning record inspires the athletes with faith in his luck. Eddie was with the Reds in 1919 when they won the flag; with the Brooklyn Robins in 1920, when they copped, and last season with the Yanks. He has yet to be with a world series winner, but this is another year, he says.

undertake the spring training grind, there is every indication that many hurlers will specialize in that department of the mound art which for a time was eclipsed by the "change of pace"—mixing the fast ones with the slow ones—in an effort to fool the batsman.

Rosenberg and Bartfield Draw

A draw decision at the end of twelve rounds was the best that Dave Rosenberg, the sensational Brooklyn middleweight, received from the judges in his bout with the veteran Soldier Bartfield at the Broadway Exhibition Club, Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 23. Dave gave the military man a severe mauling and many believed he was entitled to the verdict.

that there had been no change in the horseshoe sphere, and their contention appeared to be supported in the world series between the Giants and the Yankees in New York, when the hitting, on the average, was extremely light.

The weak swatting in the post-season series, particularly as related to the losing Yankees showed that the Hugmen could not connect with curve-ball pitching, the kind that McGraw's hurlers shoved at them from the first game to the last. The liveliness of the ball, or its lack, was not in evidence.

The series showed the value of curve pitching, so that now, with the major league teams preparing to

Mickey Walker and George Ward, both of Elizabeth, N. J., fought a fast twelve-round, no-decision bout at the Armory A. A., in Newark, Jan. 23. Both are leading contenders for the welterweight title. PEACE-TIME SPLENDOR FOR GOVERNOR'S ISLAND PLANNED BY ARMY MEN

The war is over on Governor's Island in New York harbor. The island, which is the headquarters of the Second Corps Area, Major-General R. L. Bullard commanding, is to resume its peace-time appearance. The quartermaster-general of the army has decided to sell many of the warehouses, most of the railroad and other features of the military post at public auction to the highest bidder.

In time, as the commuters on the Brooklyn and Staten Island boats pass Governor's Island, they will see around its perimeter a promenade, a bridge-path and a concrete driveway lined with elm trees, and shading from the view the athletic and drill fields and the polo grounds.

In view of the importance of Governor's Island as a reception place for distinguished foreign visitors, it is eminently desirable that these improvements be made as rapidly as possible; the island, at the present time presenting anything but an imposing appearance.

During the war it was a place of much importance, for here were handled thousands upon thousands of tons of merchandise bound for the front, a railway having been installed upon what is known as the "Fill," which connected with all of the soon to be disposed of warehouses and with a floating railroad bridge. The bridge and some few hundreds of yards of track are to remain in preparation for another emergency.

In making the alterations to the island many buildings will be left temporarily for use as living quarters for the army, which will ultimately be disposed of, as will the large dance-hall, gymnasium, roller-skating floor and indoor ice-skating rink, used by the enlisted men, the garage and railroad round-house and a row of warehouses facing the Statue of Liberty; but sooner or later Governor's Island will become its old self—a splendid and imposing entrance to the greatest city of our country.

AMAZING EXPOSURE! Learn to read any fair deck of cards—any make—any back. No marks, shiners or devices needed—absolutely nothing. Simply read what is already on the cards—just as they come from the factory. This jealously guarded secret, heretofore, was known only to those in the inner circles of the gambling fraternity. Now that I am divulging their secret to the public, big gamblers are protesting bitterly. A big gambler from Terre Haute, Ind., says: "You are putting a lot of dupes wise and making it hard for the hustlers." (I will furnish affidavit verifying the foregoing statement if requested). DON'T take another chance at cards till you learn this secret. TAKE WARNING! From an experienced. Sent C. O.
